Pathways Kenya: Conflict and Co-existence
Integrating Human Dimensions into Fish and Wildlife Management
Fairmont Mount Kenya Safari Club
Nanyuki, Kenya Jan. 10-13 2016

Join Us.
This conference and training intends to set the precedent for future research, innovation, and collaboration and also to further the application of research in the field of human dimensions of fish and wildlife management in Sub-Saharan Africa and beyond. While the specific institutions, cultures, and ecosystems may vary internationally and domestically, wildlife related problems share similarities all over the world. Much can be learned by an exchange of scientific and practical information among those involved in natural resource management at global and local levels. This exchange will be critical for building a coherent body of knowledge and understanding about environmental relationships as well as to fuel advancement in the study and practice of natural resource management.

Become a Co-host.
Help us achieve the goal of increasing capacity and knowledge among practitioners working on the ground to address the world’s most pressing local, regional, and global wildlife stewardship challenges. This is the opportunity for your organization to co-host the first Pathways Conference to take place outside of the United States. Pathways is the premier human dimensions of fish and wildlife management scientific gathering and practitioner workshop in the United States. We are working with East African partners to open up the event to a new audience. Over the years many Africans have expressed interest in attending Pathways but few are able to raise sufficient funding. After many requests, we are bringing Pathways to Africa where so many innovative and interesting wildlife management projects are based. Pathways Kenya will feature visionary wildlife managers, leaders in conservation policy, and the students and academics who are forging new frontiers.
Help Make the Pathways Kenya Training Program Accessible.

We are looking for partners who are ready to 1) help sponsor the attendance of African wildlife practitioners who are working in the field on critical wildlife management issues, 2) contribute time, expertise, and resources as volunteer trainers to run high quality training sessions, and 3) assist us in developing an innovative and practical training program. We estimate that the cost per person for attendees will be $750 - $1,000 and we would like for co-hosts to fund as many attendees as they can.

What is the Pathways Kenya Training Program?

Pathways Kenya will include a full concurrent training track targeting early and mid-career individuals for whom capacity building is needed. This will provide a unique and valuable opportunity for African students and practitioners to expand their toolboxes, exchange ideas, and build their human dimensions skills. Training participants will attend sessions focused on collaborative conservation, education, interpretation, communication, and more. They will also join conference participants to attend keynote lectures and the community-building socials that make Pathways special. Please contact us for details if you are interested in collaborating as a co-host or as a sponsor.
